Mandi Seethaler

Mandi Seethaler is the Deputy Director of the Center for Safe Alaskans. She supports the agency to ensure effective program operations in the areas of policies and procedures, budget development and fiscal management, program planning and development, and facilities. As a Child Passenger Safety (CPS) Technician and Instructor, she serves as the Statewide CPS Coordinator for the Alaska Highway Safety Office, the CPS Training Contact for NHTSA, and the Vice-Chair of the National CPS Board. Mandi was inspired to pursue all avenues of CPS after being awarded the 2012 National CPS Technician of the Year by the National CPS Board. It is deeply satisfying for her to serve the community through Child Passenger Safety. She finds balance in the workplace in budgets and spreadsheets. While she enjoys outdoor adventure in Alaska with her husband, Thaddeus, you can find her chasing cows on horseback in the mountains of Colorado every time she gets the chance. Mandi jokes that she prefers to raise her children one at a time, her two sons are 22 years apart.
