Bio for Lifesavers 2020 Webinar Series for Merissa Yellman (5.28.20)

Ms. Merissa A. Yellman, MPH, CPST-I, is an Epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, in the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control. She focuses on surveillance, study design/data analysis, and evaluation projects relating to domestic and global motor vehicle injury prevention, drowning prevention, and other unintentional injury topics. Merissa has over 10 years of public health experience and over 7 years of experience in injury/violence prevention. She began her injury prevention career at the Injury Prevention Center of Greater Dallas (IPCGD), part of Parkland Health & Hospital System. Prior to working at IPCGD, she worked in community health as a Peace Corps volunteer in Nicaragua. Merissa holds a Master of Public of Health degree from the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health and obtained a Certificate in Epidemiology for Public Health Professionals.